CANDY HIERARCHY 2017 SURVEY (~10 minutes)

This is the official survey form for the 2017 Candy Hierarchy. All data collected is anonymous and will be shared with the public as a raw spreadsheet (xml) file. This data is not intended for research purposes, but rather for the writing of a satirical/humour creative non-fiction science piece to be published at BoingBoing. Note that although unlikely (especially given the nature of the questions), there is always the possibility of someone being able to identify you based on your responses - as a result, please feel free to skip questions as you see fit. Note that although the survey will remain open until Halloween, we will likely only use the data collected up to noon (PST) of October 25th, 2017 for our formal publication of analysis at BoingBoing. See also last year's Candy Hierarchy (Cohen and Ng, 2016) for context. <https://boingboing.net/2016/10/31/the-candy-hierarchy-for-2016.html>. If you have any questions, you can contact Dave Ng at db at mail dot ubc dot ca.

JOY OR DEPAIR?

Basically, consider that feeling you get when you receive this item in your Halloween haul. Does it make you really happy (joy)? Or is it something that you automatically place in the junk pile (despair)? Meh for indifference, and you can leave blank if you have no idea what the item is.
